

The Benefits of A QuickBooks Advisor

As a small business owner your current financial team most likely consists of a bookkeeper and an accountant. So why would you need to hire a QuickBooks advisor to complete your team?

Even if you have a bookkeeper, an accountant or a staff member assisting with your "books," your financial system may not be working as efficiently as it could be. That's where a QuickBooks advisor makes its debut. As a member of your financial team your QuickBooks advisor will:

- Train you, your staff members and bookkeepers how to use QuickBooks more effectively.
- After training, your QuickBooks advisor reviews files quarterly to ensure all accounts are reconciled accurately.
- At year-end, your QuickBooks advisor will "close" the books and present a verified and accurate file to your accountant.
- A QuickBooks advisor works directly with your accountant so issues are addressed as needed and tax returns are generated quickly.
- Should you need tax planning, your QuickBooks advisor prepares your files to use for proper planning.

After all, it is not your job as a small business owner to know how to properly reconcile accounts and prepare financial files. Instead you should be doing what you do best - practicing your craft and growing your business.

At First Act Accounting, we define our success by how well we perform the “supporting role” we play for each of our valued clients. This month, we’d like to give a virtual standing ovation to one of our very special clients, Eden Mill Nature Center.

Eden Mill is a non-profit volunteer run organization that creates and supports educational and environmental programs and partnerships for our surrounding communities. We began working with Frank Marsden and Sharon Miller at Eden Mill Nature Center in December 2013 to revamp the nonprofit organization's current accounting system. We look forward to continuing to build a well-organized and efficient accounting system and supporting the organization's mission for year's to come!

"Dawn jumped right in to help us streamline our accounting procedures and transitioned us into the QuickBooks Non-profit software. Her expertise and personal attention working closely with our financial team has helped tame our seemingly overwhelming accounting situation." - Sharon Miller, President, Eden Mill Nature Center
